

Dennis P. Culhane
Professor of Social Policy
University of Pennsylvania

Biosketch:

Dennis Culhane's primary areas of research are homelessness, assisted housing policy, and policy analysis research methods. His current work includes studies of the dynamics of homelessness among families and adults, and the impact of homelessness on the utilization of health, education and social services. He is the Director of Research for the US Veteran's Administration's National Center for Homelessness among Veterans. He is also working with several states and cities to develop preventative approaches to homelessness, including "rapid exit" and community-based housing stabilization programs.
